

Stowaways in Your Workforce: Don't let your Independent Contractors and Contingent Workers Sink the Ship

11.05.2009

Topic

Now more than ever, employers are making use of independent contractors and contingent workers (typically obtained through staffing firms) to perform a variety of tasks. Many of these workers are doing the work of regular employees. King & Earl will examine the legal and business risks of these relationships and offer guidance on how employers can safely navigate these potentially rough waters.
