

ITAR/EAR Amendments for Military Electronics Become Effective December 30

12.23.2014

BY: THOMAS B. MCVEY

The amendments affecting military electronics products under Export Control Reform become effective on December 30, 2014. This will cover a large number of products in the electronics, computer, telecom and avionics industries, including many parts, components, attachments and software. The details of the amendments are discussed in our previous article, “New Export Control Requirements For Electronics Manufacturers,” which can be found here.

In addition, copies of the final regulations promulgated by the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls and the Bureau of Industry and Security can be found here.
