Tyler Rosá represents clients in a wide range of commercial real estate matters, including acquisitions, sales, leases and financings. He counsels clients throughout the life cycle of a real estate transaction, from contract drafting and negotiation to due diligence and closing. He has experience assisting clients with 1031 like-kind exchanges, and he has advised clients on environment-related real estate matters such as compliance with the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Act and Virginia Marine Resources Commission regulations.

Tyler also has experience helping clients navigate issues with breaches of contract, subcontractor payments, property boundary lines, community associations and lease warranties. He serves as vice president of CBDX, the young professionals division of the Central Business District Association (CBDA) of Virginia Beach. He was named oneCoVa BIZ's 2019 Millennials on the Move.

He earned his Juris Doctor degree from William & Mary, and his Bachelor of Arts degree, cum laude, from Dickinson College, where he played football and served as captain of the baseball team.
