

Preston Lloyd Testifies Before Virginia Housing Commission on Decline of Home Ownership in Virginia

09.18.2018

Since its peak in the early 2000s, home ownership in Virginia is reportedly down around 10 percent. Last week, Preston Lloyd testified before the Virginia Housing Commission on the reasons behind the decline. He identified rising construction costs and strict zoning laws as potential reasons. To listen to his testimony, click below.

WCVE: Why is Home-Ownership Down in Virginia?

Related People

- T. Preston Lloyd, Jr. ? 804.420.6615 ? plloyd@williamsmullen.com

Related Services

- Real Estate
- Land Use